Inter-college competitions attended by the society members:

Most team-oriented educational competitions require students to tackle demanding tasks that necessitate strong communication, collaboration, and teamwork. Engaging in these competitions enables students to acquire valuable skills in handling subjectivity and effectively evaluating risks. The varied reactions among students to these competitions also influence the extent to which they can reap these advantages. Detractors often assert that competitions create a dichotomy of winners and losers, leading the latter to question their academic capabilities and experience a blow to their self-confidence. However, we now possess knowledge on mitigating the negative impacts of not winning a competition and highlighting the importance of active participation.

Number of Seminars organized by the society: 6

Organized 2 Photo Walks and 4 Knowledge Sharing Sessions (KSS) for Organizing committee members to encourage their exploration of creativity and broaden their horizons. Photography possesses the ability to inspire individuals through various themes, potentially leading to positive transformations. Additionally, it serves as a visual learning medium, facilitating communication beyond words, changing the perception of observing things. The Darkroom offers its members the chance to acquire marketing skills such as Graphic Designing, Video editing, Motion Graphics, Content Writing, Filmmaking and Photography. To ensure practical experience and effective learning, industry-level expertise was shared through hands-on projects and informative sessions for students.

Number of Fests organized by the society: 1

The Darkroom conducted its annual flagship event, Cynosure, which featured three competitions: Online Photo Story Competition, On-Spot Photography Competition and Reel Making Competition. These competitions required participants to exhibit their creativity, capturing the world through their unique perspectives and sharing it with others. The participants were challenged to contemplate the theme (Modern Paradigm), explore their surroundings, and creatively interpret it through minimally edited photographs. The Reel Making Competition offered participants the opportunity to showcase their ideas directly through visual storytelling. The event provided valuable corporate and event management experience to the organizing students, enabling them to network with participants and diverse societies from other colleges. This immersive experience allowed the organizers to gain insights into maintaining a chain of command and effectively handling multiple tasks within tight timeframes.
